In this course you will gain a fuller understanding of modern-day America by exploring America’s economic and social development since the turn of the twentieth century. Rather than march our way from 1900 to the present, we will tackle just three big, timely issues: The Great Depression, Inequality and Mobility, and Prohibitions. The U.S. economy enters this year mired in a severe slump and with heightened attention to economic inequality. Learning about the causes and consequences of America’s greatest slump, as well as the factors that ended it, can give us a better understanding of our present predicament. Meanwhile, the War on Drugs enters its fifth decade and, despite frequent comparisons to our short-lived experiment with alcohol prohibition, shows few signs of ending. We will gain insight into these issues by studying them in depth from the dual perspectives of economics and history. We will hear other perspectives as well, notably interviews with individuals who were there for some of the great historical changes of the past century. Since this is an upper-level expository writing class, you will have many opportunities to work on and improve your writing.

You’ll never learn where it’s at until you learn where it’s from.

Required texts

- Various articles and book chapters, available through the ANGEL site for this course.

Optional text that I cannot recommend strongly enough

William Strunk, Jr., & E.B. White. The Elements of Style. Any edition. This slim, inexpensive paperback is packed with valuable insight about writing, from basic to advanced. It’s the best-known book about writing, and for good reason: it’s quick and painless to read, and it will almost surely improve your writing.
Two things you should not be without for this course: A good college dictionary and a stapler.

Prerequisites

ECO 101 (introductory microeconomics) and ECO 200 (introductory macroeconomics); also, ENG 102 (Composition II) or ENG 204 (Writing About Literature) or passage of exemption examination.

Learning objectives: Upon completion of this course, you should be able to:

- Offer explanations of major crises such as the Panic of 1907, the Great Depression, and the post-2007 slump.
- Distinguish between competing explanations of these events.
- Apply microeconomic concepts such as asymmetric information, cost-benefit analysis, and human capital to historical phenomena.
- Apply macroeconomic concepts such as aggregate supply, aggregate demand, fiscal policy, and monetary policy to historical phenomena.
- Identify changes in the economic status of women, African Americans, and blue-collar workers since 1900.
- Compare and contrast the methodologies of economic historians and traditional historians.
- Write about these phenomena in clear and concise English.

Assessment

Since this course is an expository writing class, (short) papers and exam essay questions will constitute an important part of your grade, and the clarity of your writing will have some bearing on how they are graded. Your course score will be a weighted average of the following:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Short research paper</th>
<th>30%</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Preliminaries:</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Topic paper (3%), Data appendix (2%), Sample pages and outline (5%)</td>

The grading scale is basically the standard one:

- 93-100% A;
- 90-92% A-;
- 88-89% B+;
- 83-87% B;
- 80-82% B-;
- 78-79% C+;
- 73-77% C;
- 70-72% C-;
- 67-69% D+;
- 63-66% D;

Discussion and preparation:
-- Prep papers: Each week you will write a discussion “prep” paper, containing questions and comments regarding all of the assigned readings for the current week. Each week’s prep paper is due before the start of class on Monday and will be submitted online via ANGEL. These should be written as coherent short papers with two or three paragraphs and an interesting title. About 300 words ought to do it. Keeping in mind that the purpose of these papers is to prepare you for the class discussions, try to write about things you find interesting or which spark your curiosity. The prep papers should not contain much summary.

-- One-sentence summaries: Each week you will write a set of one-sentence summaries, one for each of the readings for the current week. Each set of summaries is due at the start of class on Monday, typed and printed. These are separate from the prep papers. They are designed to sharpen your reading comprehension and writing skills and further prepare you for class discussion. Be sure to include the author’s name and the reading’s title with each summary, so that it’s clear which reading is being summarized.

-- Class participation: Since this class thrives on discussion, class participation will be 10% of your final grade. Bringing your prep paper to class will help you remember what you had to say. (I will weight participation a bit more heavily for people whose participation is better than their prep papers.). On a typical day we will devote about the first 30 – 40 minutes to discussion. I will be counting on you to initiate at least some of the discussion. Students can also participate online, by leaving trailing comments, questions, web links, and various tangents in the online Discussion Forum.

-- Extra credit: I don’t offer emergency extra credit, but there will be some extra-credit opportunities, including attending certain talks or events on campus. And in Week 1 and Week 11, in which prep papers and one-sentence summaries are not required, you can do them for extra credit. Late extra credit work will not be accepted, though Week 1’s extra credit work is due Wed., Jan. 30.

Exams:
-- The exams will be part essay, part short-answer questions, and part multiple-choice.
-- The final exam is optional. If you take it, your overall course score will be a weighted average on a 110-point scale instead of a 100-point scale. (In other words, the final is not extra credit.) The scoring on the exams will be asymmetrically cumulative in that if you take both exams and do better on the final than on the midterm, your final exam score will replace your midterm score. If you do worse on the final than on the midterm, then the midterm and final will count equally.

-- Make-up exams will be an option only for students who have a valid, documented excuse for missing an exam.

Writing and other help

The College Writing Center can offer valuable help in organizing, writing, and revising your papers. It is now located in Penfield Library, rooms 302 – 306, and is reachable online: http://www.oswego.edu/academics/support/OLS/wc.html.

Students who have a disability that might interfere with their ability to complete this course successfully are encouraged to speak, confidentially, to me or to contact the Office of Disability Services.

Can’t we have a little chuckle once in a while? Yes, but classroom etiquette is still important.

Classroom etiquette includes arriving on time and not leaving early, avoiding bathroom breaks, keeping one’s cell phone silent and not texting, not eating noisily or blowing bubbles, and not having private conversations. Breaches of any of these things are distracting, disruptive, and disrespectful to me and your fellow classmates.

Crime does not pay!
Per College policy, students who are caught cheating on either of the exams or the research paper will have their offense reported to the college authorities. Except in rare cases that seem to require a disciplinary penalty such as suspension, students who are caught cheating will typically receive an academic penalty. Students who are caught cheating on either exam, or on either draft of the research paper, will automatically fail the course. Students who are caught cheating on a prep paper or another item will receive a zero for the item in question, as well as zeroes for two other, equivalently weighted items (e.g., two other prep papers; think of it as a “treble damages” policy).
